TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
June 17th, 1912.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. T. Waller in the chair.

Present Reeve Alexander and Councillors Madill, Simpson, Osborne, Carson, Dickinson and Denison.

The minutes of the last regular and special sessions were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Mr. W. H. Harvey stating that he had been in communication with the Construction Service Company, Limited, regarding the contracts for the Sanitary Sewers and the Sewage Disposal Works, which contracts were awarded by the Corporation to this Company, and are at present, he believed awaiting execution by the Company. Being upon the ground and having the necessary equipment for doing this work, he has prepared to take over the contract of the Construction Service Co., on precisely the same terms as those named in the contracts now awaiting their execution. He did not mean that he was in any way attempting to undermine the Construction Service Co., but this proposition coming from him was with their concurrence, inasmuch as these contracts quite properly provide that no portion of the work can be sublet without the town's concurrence, and it would be far more satisfactory if in any case he were to do the work, to deal with him directly than to deal with him as a sub-contractor. If the council would consent to this change by substituting him as the contractor instead of the Construction Service Co., he would obtain for the council the written concurrence of the Construction Service Co., and will furnish any security that may be required for the faithful performance of the work, and would in every respect comply with every term and condition named in the contracts which have been prepared by the town's engineer, so that the municipality will have precisely the same protection as they would if dealing alone with the Construction Service Company.

A representative of the Construction Service Company was present and stated that, owing to his Company having considerable other work to do, they were perfectly willing that the contracts should be turned over to Mr. Harvey. However, if the council did not see fit to do this his company was prepared to go on with the work immediately and fulfil the contract.

Considerable discussion took place among the members of the council and the matter was finally dealt with by the following motion:

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Denison, that subject to the approval of the engineer, Mr. Wright, and subject to the consent in writing of the Construction Service Co., Limited, that the contracts for the construction of the Sewage Disposal Works, and of the Diversion Outfall Sewer be awarded to Mr. Harvey, ac-by Reeve Alexander, that the collector be notified that he may return the 1911 roll on June 24th. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Osborne, that the collector of 1912 in accordance with a resolution of council all taxes must be paid before December 15th, 1912, this council will insist that returned on that date. Carried.

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

She took up the book which lay on the marble table before her and, without a word, would have passed out, but Julian extended his hand slightly to stay her.

"This is the last night," he said in a low voice and with a glance towards the terrace on which Vane's steps still sounded.

"Yes," she said in a casual way. "It has been a pleasant time, and my father and I have enjoyed it very much. We are going South—to Nice, first, I think."

"Do not," he said, that was all. "Wait until—a few days."

She opened her sapphire eyes upon him with haughty surprise, but they flickered and fell under the steady regard of his sombre ones.

"Why should we wait?" she asked. "I think we are going straight through London; in fact, I know we are."

His lips drew together, and his lids fell over his eyes for a moment.

"Can nothing I can say dissuade you?" he asked in a still lower voice. "Do you think that I can bear to part with you for—how many months? Have you forgotten what passed between us—there?" He pointed to the terrace.

She laughed with an affectation of contemptuous amusement.

"I don't care for the best of melodramas, Mr. Shore; and I am not likely to remember them," she said.

"And yet you do remember," he said, quietly. "There is no moment when you do not remember it, even as I do. And our compact dwells with me night and day, is burned into my very soul."

She moved her queenly head impatiently, and tried to laugh.

"Then I wish you would forget it, please," she said, "or cut it out of your very soul." It was a piece of madness, the madness of a moment, the moment of a woman's weakness, of which you availed yourself most fully, Mr. Shore. It was never more than that, it could not possibly be more. If I were not able to laugh at it, I should be ashamed of it.

"We agreed," he said, as if she had not spoken, "that if I were master here you would be my wife. You taunted me with the impossibility of the pact, but you swore, with the kiss which is a woman's oath, that you would keep it."

"It was a safe promise—a promise in which there was little danger of fulfilment as if I had promised to be Queen of England when you were King. There is the master of Lesbrough"—she raised her hand towards the sound of Vane's steps on the terrace—"and you are still, and will be but the dependent."

"And the heir," he said as quietly as before. "You forget that. If anything should happen to still those steps forever, I shall claim the fulfilment of your promise, your oath."

an anxiety bordering on dread.

"Don't send me, Mr. Julian!" she said, her thin fingers moving swiftly. "Let me stay to-night, till you go!"

He looked at her with a frown of surprise that was not altogether assumed.

"What do you mean? What is the matter with you, Deborah?" he asked. "Why should you object to leave here a few hours earlier than you intended?"

Her speechless lips worked and her eyes sought the floor as if they were afraid to meet his.

"Let me stay, Mr. Julian!" she pleaded. "You are not well—you do not sleep. I watch—I can see the light under your door. There—there is something on your mind, something—" Her fingers ceased and her hands gripped each other as if she had said too much.

Julian laughed noiselessly.

"Really, I don't know what can be the matter with you, Deborah!" he said, with an impatient gesture; but her strange reluctance to leave him only made him more determined that she should go. "If you said that you were not well it would be more to the purpose; in fact, I've noticed that you've not been looking the thing lately. This place does not suit you. Now, don't argue any longer, my good Deborah. I want the London rooms put straight by the time I get up there to-morrow—for I leave here to-morrow—and I intend you shall go to-night."

She made a gesture of resignation—it was almost Oriental in its emphasis—and busied about the room putting a thing here and there in its place. Presently she touched him on the shoulder nervously and pointed to the cords of the ventilator.

"They are nearly broken," she said.

Julian glanced up and then turned away.

"I know! I know!" he said, impatiently. "It does not matter; they will last. Let them alone, please!"

She moved towards the door, but paused and looked at him with a mixture of affection, entreaty and despair; then she raised her hands and said on them, slowly, as one reluctantly preferring a claim, recalling an obligation:

"Mr. Julian, I—I served your father faithfully. I have served you, for love of him and yourself. I—I nursed you. I'd have laid down my life for him, I'd lay it down for you, Mr. Julian—"

He nodded, as if he were schooling himself to be patient with her.

"I am not like other women. I am deaf and dumb, but when any trouble has threatened you or him I have known it, known it though no word has been spoken, no sign, that others could read. I have been made

"And the heir," he said as quietly as before. "You forget that. If anything should happen to still those steps forever, I shall claim the fulfillment of your promise, your oath, Judith."

His face was no paler than usual; indeed, a spot of color had come into the hollow cheeks, but Judith Orme fought with the shudder that ran through her and tried in vain to meet the steady regard of the black eyes with a contemptuous smile.

"You cling to melodrama," she said, with a shrug of her shoulders.

"Will you wait in England for a week?" he asked, as if her taunt had not touched him.

"No!" she replied.

"Three days—two?" he said, slowly, patiently.

"Not one!" was the instant response. "Will you let me pass, please? I shall be late."

He stood aside, but as she was sweeping by him he caught her hand and pressed it to his lips.

"For all your gibes and mockery, I know your heart," he whispered. "I can trust you. Hate is stronger than love, and I am sure of my reward. You will keep your word!"

She looked strangely at him over her shoulder, paused as if she were listening to the footsteps outside, then, with a flash of the sapphire eyes as if a latent fire had suddenly sprung up within them, said, in a voice almost as low as his:

"Yes, though I do not know whether I hate him or you worse, I will keep my word."

When she had gone Julian stood for a moment looking before him, his tongue moistening his hot lips. She had spoken of madness, and he knew that it was the right word to describe the passion which consumed him, the compact he had made with her. But there is a grim method in some kind of madness.

He went out by a door at the end of the conservatory and, making his way through the ladies' garden, entered the laboratory and sank into a chair.

"She will go," he muttered. "And it is only the sight of her that gives me courage. When she has gone I shall be as weak as water. It is her presence, the sound of her voice, that drives the fear out of my heart and fills my veins with fire. No, I can't wait! I can't wait! It must be to-night or never!"

As he spoke his face grew livid with some emotion, with the ecstasy of fear battling with the frenzy of desire. The door opened slowly, and before he could drive the terrible expression from his face, Deborah entered with her noiseless step. He started to his feet and went to the table, while a thought flashed through his brain. The woman watched him too closely, knew too much of him; she was better out of the way. He turned again slowly, and with a smile signed to her.

"Is your box packed, Deborah?"

"No," she replied, with downcast eyes.

"Then pack it," he said. "I want you to go up to-night instead of to-morrow. It will be more convenient. You don't mind the short notice? A carriage shall take you to the station. There is a train at eight-thirty. It will give you time?"

She raised her eyes and looked at him with a keen but veiled anxiety.

an dear and dumb, but when any trouble has threatened you or him I have known it, known it though no word has been spoken, no sign, that others could read, has been made. There—there is trouble threatening now." She shuddered. "I know—who should know better?—when there is something on your mind, and there is something dark and dreadful on it now! Mr. Julian—ah, for God's sake don't do it! She's not worth it! She's beautiful—oh, I know, I know; but she's not worth it!"

Julian's face went white and into his eyes crept the reflection of the nameless terror and dread which shone glassily in hers; then he laughed, a laugh that sounded forced and ghastly in the face of the woman's terror, and, taking out his purse, he held out some money.

"Here's your fare, Deborah," he said, gently enough, but his lips, though they smiled, declared his inflexible determination.

As she took the money she clung to his hand and slid to her knees, her livid face turned up to him imploringly.

"Master, I see more than most, feel more than those who can speak and hear," she signed. "I am afraid! I know that look! Your mother's face used to wear it—I am afraid! Ah, let me stay!"

He raised her, and with his hand on her shoulder led her to the door.

"Foolish Deborah!" he signed as he opened it. "You are nervous and out of sorts, full of wild fancies and presentiments. I'll send you to a doctor when I come home."

She protested, pleaded no longer, but, with a look at him, the look of a dog which, indifferent to all the world besides its faithful and loving to its master, bent her head resignedly and went out.

Julian stood frowning for a moment or two, gnawing at his lip as if he were asking himself how much she guessed, or whether it was only an exhibition of nerves; then, with a gesture, the Spanish gesture which wipes away a distasteful subject, went up to dress.

The dinner that night was a very bright one. Judith, in a wonderful dress which set off her marvellous beauty to perfection, talked almost unceasingly, her eyes shining like stars, her lips, usually so immobile, curved with the smile which women wear when they are happiest—or wish you to think them so. Vane, with his grave regard, looked from her to Julian and wondered whether they had at last—on this last opportunity—become betrothed; but he could glean nothing from Julian's face. Serene and unclouded, it told nothing.

Lady Fanworthy, at the head of the table, watched and listened with the faint smile in her keen eyes. The Letchfords almost flirted openly with each other; Sir Chandos ate—and drank—steadily, showing his teeth when a witty remark was made, and stroking the carefully dyed moustache as he glanced covertly at that vision of loveliness, his daughter, as Julian and Vane, who, as the dinner proceeded, leaned back and dropped out of the discussion of plans for the winter.

Even at the most public moments he had this habit of "dropping out," and away soared his thoughts, and his spirit, to a certain nameless isle, where moved the slim, graceful figure of the girl he had loved—and lost. The voices round the dinner table smote vaguely on his ear, for he was listening to that clear, girlish voice which haunted him, sleeping or waking.

Julian had got up and, as if me-

"That's just it," said Vane. "I don't care. It's all one to me where I am. Few places or things hold any charm for me."

Julian looked at him with a strange mixture of curiosity and aloofness, as if his mind were preoccupied. Then he turned to the furnace again.

"Bother!" he said. "I shall have to get more spirit. Do you mind?"
He looked over his shoulder at Vane,
and the bluish flames cast a ghastly light on his pale face—"do you mind stirring this stuff while I'm gone? I shan't be more than a minute or
two. I keep it outside."

Vane got up from his chair and shrugged his shoulders good-humored-
ly. "All right; but I hope I sha'n't spoil it; I'm not used to this game."

"Oh, no," responded Julian, casually. "Just keep it stirred."

As he opened the door he glanced over his shoulder again at Vane; and surely if Vane had seen the expression in the black eyes shining forth from the dark shadows surrounding them, he would have felt something?

No matter if she did. At that moment he felt that he would like her to have known, would wish that she should share his guilt.

"In my den," he replied steadily.
He looked at his watch as he spoke,
and his lips moved as if he were making a calculation.

"In your den—what is he doing
there?" she asked.

Julian smiled with an affectation of surprise. "He is writing; we are talking over our programme, and have decided to join you either at Monte Carlo or Cairo."

She drew a breath of relief, but said nothing. Prance came down the stairs with the can in his hand, and,
with a murmured "good-night," she went up.

"I've been able to get a little for you, Mr. Julian," said Prance.

Julian thanked him, and, taking up his song again, went slowly toward the Witch's Room.

Vane had drawn a chair up to the spirit furnace and he leant over the pot stirring it mechanically. Yes; he was decidedly de trop; if he were out of the way, Julian and Judith would reign at Lesborough now in the heyday of their youth; with their capacity for enjoyment still at its height; while he—He sighed listlessly; then the sigh was followed by a cough, for the fumes were beginning to rise from the pot and had got into his lungs.

"Phew!" he muttered. "Hope nothing's going wrong with the beastly stuff; Julian will be disappointed.
Am I stirring it enough?" The fumes grew thicker, so that he felt some difficulty in breathing. Gradually the difficulty increased and, half choking, he looked round the room.
"Ventilator closed, of course," he said to himself. "These scientific chaps seem to be able to breathe without air; it's use, I suppose. I must open that thing."

Julian's glance lasted but a moment, and he went out and closed the door softly behind him. He did not turn the key, for the door locked by a spring, as did that which led to the ladies' garden, and to both doors only he and Deborah had keys. Outside the door he paused a moment, biting his lips and driving the tell-tale expression from his eyes, then he went slowly, and humming the air he had sung a little while ago, into the hall. Prance, the butler, was standing there and Julian went up to him.

"Oh, Prance," he said, "I've run out of methylated spirits; do you think you could get me some?"

"Yes, Mr. Julian. I generally keep some by me in my pantry. Shall I bring it to your room?"

"Oh, don't trouble; I'll wait here, thanks," said Julian. He sang rather more loudly as Letchford came down the stairs.

"Seen Vane?" he asked. "If he hasn't gone to bed I want him to come and have a pipe. I can't sleep, somehow," he laughed shamefacedly. "Usually drop off as soon as my head's on the pillow."

"Vane's in my den—writing letters. We were making our plans for abroad. I'll tell him when I go back."

"Oh, don't bother him if he's writing," said Letchford, and he went on to the smoking-room.

Prance came back with the spirit-can in his hand.

"Very sorry, Mr. Julian," he said, "but I've run out. Some of the maids must have been at it for their curling tongs. I daresay I could get some from one of them."

Julian thought swiftly. "Ah, yes," he said. "I wish you would. I want it particularly. Send up to Miss Orme's maid and ask her."

"I'll go myself, sir," said Prance, and he went up the stairs.

Julian, still humming, went to the smoking-room and looked in. Letchford was walking up and down, smoking vigorously and rumpling his short hair, a trick he had when he was worried or puzzled.

"Come in and sit down," he said to Julian. "I've got what my wife calls a fidgety fit on me to-night; kind of a—a—what do you call it, presentiment."

Julian smiled. "That ragout was very rich," he said. "I think that chef always overdoes the butter. I'll come and have a cigarette presently; but I must go back to the den first. I'll bring Vane with me."

"Do!" said Letchford, with undue earnestness.

Julian nodded and sauntered back to the hall. As he did so a tall figure in a tea-gown glided down the stairs. It was Judith. He stopped short and their eyes met. In hers was a covert fear, a dread questioning and doubt; in his the gleam of a deadly determination.

"You sent for some spirit?" she said in a low voice.

The expression of his face changed to one of passionate admiration, and his eyes roamed over the beautiful face and tall, light figure.

"Yes," he said, in an ordinary tone. "But I am sorry if I disturbed you, your maid—"

"My maid is getting it," she said. "Where—where is Vane?"

His lids drooped. She, too, was asking for Vane. Did she suspect any-

"Ventilator closed, of course," he said to himself. "These scientific chaps seem to be able to breathe without air; it's use, I suppose. I must open that thing."

He rose, and to his amazement felt his legs weaken under him. His breath was coming in gasps, the room was filling with the fumes. Staggering and holding by the table and the chair, he made his way to the wall where the rope hung and pulled it with a jerk. It broke, and the lower part fell over his arms. He was half blinded and nearly suffocated by this time, and he made for the door with his hands outstretched like a blind man. In the confusion of his mind caused by the deathly sensation of asphyxiation he missed the door and groped with his hands along the panelled wall. At last, as his sight and his breath were utterly failing, he touched the portiere curtain; but he could only cling to it. It came down with his weight, and he fell to the ground, still gripping it.

Protect Sheep From Dogs.

A Minnesota farmer says that he keeps dogs away from his flock by putting up in his pasture the dummy of a man holding a stick for a gun. This dummy is taken down every morning and put up again in the evening at different places from night to night. He says a sheep killing dog will not go near enough to the dummy to discover that it is a bogus man.

Housework Drudgery!

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She brushes, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the stress of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes rest in bed is not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The real need of weak, nervous women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and as Mrs. Briggs and others testify:

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

MRS. BRIGGS.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any druggist persuade you that his unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit.

MRS. BRAZILL BRIGGS, of 529 N. Washington St., Delphos, Ohio, writes: "Having taken your 'Favorite Prescription' for a bad case of intestinal disease and constipation with woman's ills, for which I was almost unable to do anything, I think I am safe in saying that there are no remedies in the world like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Purifying Lotion Tablets.' I am now enjoying the best of health, and thank Dr. Pierce for his wonderful medicines which have done me a world of good."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

HOW TO REPOT PLANTS.

Hints For the Woman Who Loves Flowers.

In the spring plants and ferns growing indoors begin to make fresh growth, and quite a number need repotting.

Many plants in warm rooms also begin to put out fresh shoots.

If such plants are repotted they generally improve very much in growth.

But some people do not know the right way to go to work, and sometimes the plant dies in consequence of repotting.

The great thing to remember is not to hurt the roots. Turn the plant out of its old pot and shake off or scrape away any grit that comes easily.

But if the plant has a tight ball of roots, with soil firmly wedged between them, it is better not to disturb this, but merely to use a larger pot for it.

Take your new pot, which should be clean and dry, cover the hole at the bottom with a broken crock, hollow side downward and cover this again with a few smaller pieces.

Then put in a little fresh soil at the bottom and place the plant upright on this. Fill in all round with fresh soil and ram it in firmly with a wedge shaped piece of wood.

Very small pots, however, only need to have the soil made firm by pressing with the fingers. A rim an inch deep should be left between the top of the pot and the soil of a five inch pot.

After repotting plants should always be watered and kept for a day or two in a rather warmer place than usual.

Never use sour, exhausted soil from the garden for repotting, but get good fine loam. A small quantity of this can be bought at any good nursery. It should, when used, be just moist enough to cling together, but not wet or sticky.

If there is a leaf heap in your garden some of the most decayed of this may be mixed with the soil at the bottom of the pot.

Potting soil should always have a little coarse sand mixed with it, as this helps to keep it sweet.

CROP COMPETITIONS.

The following circular is being sent out to Agricultural Societies in reference to the Field Crop Competition.

Dear Sir—I am pleased to inform you that besides the splendid prizes offered for grain and sheaves to the five prize winners in the Standing Field Crop Competition at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition, to be held in Ottawa, Sept. 5-16th, are offering the following cash prizes for which the winners in the local Standing Field Crop Competitions are eligible:

These exhibits must consist of two bushels sacks of grain and one and one-half bushels of potatoes. The Ontario Department of Agriculture will supply stencilled and numbered sacks to those who make entry.

All entries for the above exhibits must be made to the Superintendent, J. Lockie Wilson, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, not later than August 20th, 1912.

The grain winning prizes at the Central Canada Exhibition will be retained by the Department of Agriculture.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Toronto Globe—The significant feature of the reduction of cement duty is the recognition of the fact that the tariff is a burden. Once the Government thought it nothing but a blessing, the higher the greater.

Galt Reporter—With the evidence relating to the Farmers Bank failure now before them, will the public be convinced that the Hon. W. S. Fielding was not to blame? The evidence has located the real offenders, and the late Finance Minister is now exonerated.

Manitoba Free Press—What has happened in the matter of the cement duty is another indication of the power of public opinion when aroused and directed. The trusts, it is easy to foresee, will have plenty of trouble in their efforts to boost their common stock to par.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review—But if the people of the west are allowed to make the discovery that they may import cement from the United States, without danger to their locality they may wonder why the importation of other necessities should be so dangerous.

Ottawa Free Press—It is only a strange coincidence, of course, but the day selected for the announcement of the partial suspension of the duty on cement is the day when Hon. Robert Rogers is to be feted in Regina. It's very queer how these big events do happen together.

Saskatoon Phoenix—With Lord Charles Beresford approving of his naval policy Mr. Winston Churchill will probably be able to convince Mr. Borden that the best thing he can do is to continue the naval scheme commenced by his illustrious predecessor, Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Montreal Herald—When will Mr. White stop, now that he has yielded to the demand of the west? Disastrous things must happen. Conservatives said so last September. If disaster does not come it may be taken as justification of the Liberal policy and that is quite unthinkable.

Calgary Herald—Boys are not allowed to run locomotives on railways, even with block signals and other safeguards to protect the lives of passengers. But any boy who wants to borrow a powerful motor car and race over the highways at railroad speed, regardless of safety, may do so at pleasure.

Hamilton Spectator—It looks like straining the immigration laws to a sharp tension when a native-born Canadian—and a Hamilton man at that—is refused admission to this country simply because he had not $25 in his possession. Where should a man be able to rest his weary feet if not where he first saw the light?

Windsor Record—Better still, and what Parliament really ought to offer, would be a prize for a strictly Canadian flag, representing the nine Provinces and typifying Canadian sentiment and Canadian unity. Canadian first, last and all the time. That's the slogan that will draw us all together. Then why not give us a Canadian flag?

A sad case was brought to the attention of a charitable society when they received an appeal for relief from an elderly woman.

Her husband had been but died without leaving the widow did not insist to a third of the estate, everything over to the children that they would look the balance of her life. She with one after another of sons and daughters, and the way in which she causes a very serious reflection on the ingratitude of children.

The main point is, how is not fair for a man to protected and inexperienced the responsibility of deciding business affairs. It was the duty of the husband as it of every person, to make a is no excuse, because it is necessary to employ a large large expense—the BAX can be obtained for 35 cents, and each form is a and typifying Canadian sentiment and Canadian unity. Canadian first, last and all the time. That's the slogan that will draw us all together. Then why not give us a Canadian flag?

Kingston Standard—Mr. Lloyd George hit a good many of the English nobility pretty hard when he told them that the estates they held had been stolen from the Church, and that their ancestors had been enriched by plundering the altars. The nobility had better let ancient history alone. Too many of their titles and estates rest on very unsavory and rotten foundations.

Cobalt Nugget—It appears decidedly amusing to see Conservatives papers which opposed reciprocity favoring the reduction or removal of the duty on machinery which they use in their own plants. They are quite willing it would seem to see the farmer pay a stiff duty on his farm implements, if he uses implements of American make, or the users of various kinds of machinery, which are highly protected.

Lethbridge News—Viewing the exhibition, one acquainted with the facts might easily have carried away the impression that there were but two really important manufacturing centres in the eastern Canada—Toronto and Montreal. How far this is from being the truth easterners know, but the trouble is that many people in the west do not, and it looks as if other eastern manufacturing centres don't care if they don't.

Montreal Star—Vehicles of the great speed and power of automobiles must be driven with more care, if they are to retain the freedom of crowded city thoroughfares. We certainly cannot sacrifice our children at the present rate to purchase the use of the finest invention ever conceived in the brain of man. Babies are the best things in the world, and they have "right of way." The motor-car people will do wisely to take exceeding pains not to kill any more of them.

Victoria Colonist—The experience of Saskatchewan and Alberta is that the newcomers from the United States are amongst the best settlers that the Provinces have. They are men who have come to Canada with the means to acquire a considerable stake in the country, and we question very much indeed if they have any intention of moving on. The chances are that as they grow acquainted with our form of government and realize that there is more safety of life and security of property than on the other side of the line they will become the most loyal Canadians of us all.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle. HAVE YOU A BAD SORE ?

If so, remember these facts—Zam-Buk is by far the most widely used balm in Canada! Why has it become so popular? Because it heals sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it. Why not let it heal your sore?

Remember that Zam-Buk is altogether different to the ordinary ointments. Most of these consist of animal fats. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal fat, or any mineral matter. It is absolutely herbal.

Remember that Zam-Buk is at the same time healing, soothing, and antiseptic. Kills poison instantly, and all harmful germs. It is suitable alike for recent injuries and diseases, and for chronic sores, ulcers, etc. Test how different and superior Zam-Buk really is. All druggists and stores at 50c. box. Use also Zam-Buk Soap. Relieves sunburn and prevents freckles. Best for baby's bath. 25c. tablet.

HAVE MADE A WILL: A MASTER OF DETAIL.

Don't Neglect Aged Mother.

When a man is brought to the attention of a charitable society recently, received an application for an elderly woman. She had been prosperous, and had been leaving any will. She did not insist on her rights of the estate, but turned over to the children, believing they would look after her for the rest of her life. She had lived with another of her married daughters, and her story of the life in which she was treated with a serious reflection on the part of the children.

At this point is, however, that it was for a man to leave an inexperienced woman the responsibility of deciding on pure affairs. It was the plain duty of the husband as it is the duty of the son, to make a will. There is, because it is no longer to employ a lawyer or incur expense—the BAX Will Forms furnished for 35 cents. Accompanying form is a specimen will.

Paintings to Suit Abbey Had to Be Historically Correct.

One of the strongest characteristics of Abbey was his terror of anachronism. No detail of a great canvas was small enough to escape his infinite precaution in this regard, no research too exhausting that yielded the correct answer to some archaic matter of dress or armor. Because of this scrupulous care his studio at Morgan hall, itself an ancient building, more than 300 years old, became a veritable museum of heraldic shields, coifs and casques. Whenever he wished to paint a certain detail of complicated armor he purchased or borrowed a whole suit as a model. Once, so the story is told, when Abbey had completed a large painting depicting an ancient court scene he discovered that the quarterings in the heraldic shield woven in a woman's skirt were incorrect. He painted out the skirt and corrected his error.

His masterpiece in oils, the "Quest of the Holy Grail," which he did for the Boston Library, has been preserved.

LEGAL SEALS IN JAPAN.

Every Person Must Have One Which the Government Registers.

Japanese seals (han) are of wood, stone or metal, with signs engraved on the face. They are used in addition to a signature to represent an individual, a legal person or a corporation. The seals of the emperor are distinguished as privy and state seals. They are each three inches square.

The state seal is used mostly upon documents relating to foreign countries. The privy seals are stamped on imperial rescripts, issued for proclamations at home.

Japanese law requires that each individual should send in an impression of his seal as a specimen (called jitsu-in) to have it registered and kept in a government office (district office of a city, town or village) that it may represent himself in a deed.

The material employed to make these seals consists of various kinds of precious stones, gold, silver, etc. Those mostly in use at the present day are of agate, rock crystal, ivory, rhinoceros or buffalo horn, shell, marbles or of cherry wood or boxwood, and recently india rubber has come in use.

The ink used for stamping is called niku. It is generally of vermilion red. The cheapest kind of seals are made of boxwood and sold at 5 cents apiece. Most seals are oval in shape, but some are round and others square. They rarely exceed one-half inch in diameter.—Oriental Review.

PEROXIDE'S MANY USES.

It is a Valuable Antiseptic and Can Be Employed in Other Ways.

One of the most powerful bleaching agents employed in various trades is peroxide of hydrogen, also known as hydrogen dioxide and oxygenated water. The natural color in ostrich plumes is removed by it, and it will also bleach a great number of other things, such as bones, ivory, silver, wood, silk, cotton and hair. It can be used to restore the color to old oil paintings which have become darkened by age.

Peroxide is a valuable antiseptic and will also destroy objectionable micro-organisms in water. It can even be used to cure indigestion, but for this purpose as well as for other medicinal uses it must be diluted. A drop of pure peroxide is strong enough to raise a white blister on the skin.

Minute quantities of peroxide of hydrogen are found in the air, in rain water and in snow, and it is sometimes found in the juices of certain plants. The liquid is produced on a large scale by the action of acids on peroxide of sodium. The solution may be concentrated by allowing the water to freeze out, by passing dry air through it or by evaporation in a vacuum over sulphuric acid.—New York Sun.

Brother Jonathan.

The origin of the term "Brother Jonathan" was as follows: When General Washington went to Massachusetts to organize the army he found a great lack of ammunition and of other necessary means for the conduct of the war, and at one time it seemed quite impossible to arrange things properly. Jonathan Trumbull was then governor of the state of Connecticut, and the general, who placed complete reliance on his excellency's judgment, said, "We must consult Brother Jonathan." He did so, with the satisfactory result that the governor was successful in supplying many of the pressing wants of the army, and thenceforth, whenever difficulties arose and the army spread over the country, "We must consult Brother Jonathan" became a common saying until it passed into a nickname for the whole country.

rect. He painted on the skirt and corrected his error.

His masterpiece in oils, the "Quest of the Holy Grail," which he did for the Boston library, has been pronounced perfect in every detail of architec- ture, of dress and heraldry. His "Coro- nation of Edward VII." has been praised by antiquarians because of its perfection and accuracy of detail. It was this painting which won Abbey his greatest fame in England.

Though Abbey spent nearly all of his working years in England and on the continent, he did not consider him- self an expatriate, and he was always keenly American in his sentiments. Baseball was with him a consuming passion. When he discovered that there was none to play his favorite game in England he took up cricket as the next best thing, and cricket was his favorite pastime.—New York Sun.

FEMININE AUTOCRATS.

Women of Sahara Rule the Men With Rods of Iron.

The Tuaregs, found in the vilayet of Tripoli, are descended from the Auro- rian of old, who in the fourth cen- tury took Leptis from the Romans after eight days' siege.

Among the Tuaregs, writes Hanns Vischer in "Across the Sahara," it is mas, the brute, who by all the laws of the country has to obey the women. Descent is traced through the mother. Woman shows her proud face to all the world, while the man goes veiled. In the presence of a woman of noble birth men cover their faces and heads altogether. The women give the chil- dren what little instruction they have and train them to respect and obey them.

The stick he carries and the great wooden box into which he puts what his wife suffers him to have are all the man possesses and all he retains if for some reason his wife chooses to di- vorce him.

In Ghat when a man goes out after sunset he is usually followed by a negro servant, sent by his wife to dog his steps, and woe to him if he forgets himself or comes home too late! He will find the door shut and must count himself lucky if he is not put on to the street altogether.

The young man who in spite of all this wants to marry must pay a heavy sum for the bride, to obtain which he is obliged to look for other means than his usual work for the Arab trader. Thus he is forced into taking part in one of the annual razzias.

The women decide when the right moment has come, and the men sally forth against some luckless caravan or to the rich highlands of Tibesti.—P

POPULARITY OF BASEBALL.

Qualities in the Game That Endear It to the Public.

There must be special qualities in a game that can take and keep such a hold on millions of hard headed, healthy Americans from boys to earnest old men. What are these qualities? Here is an attempt to define them:

First.—Efficiency. No other spectacle shows the human being to such advantage on the side of efficiency. If pole be mentioned to controvert this it certainly cannot compare in the next three advantages to be mentioned, and the inferiority of the circus the astute reader can figure out also from what follows:

Second.—Visibility. A person who understands the game sees almost every play perfectly. He sees the delivery by the pitcher, the preparation and swing of the batter, the ball dashing away, the rush, grasp and recovery of the infielder, the race of the runner down the line, the catch of the baseman and is ready to dispute with the umpire whether the ball arrived a tenth of a second before or a tenth of a second after the runner.

Third.—Sustained suspense. An English student of American affairs, endeavoring to make his countrymen understand the hold of the game, stated that if they would imagine the most intense moment in the fifth set of a tennis match being played for the championship of the world they might get an idea of the intensity of interest that pertains to a ball game at almost any time in any one of the nine innings.

Fourth.—The democratic background. The interest of watching the experts is inseparable from the fact that almost every boy in the United States is brought up to play the game itself. One sometimes hears it said that watching the game is less desirable than playing it, which is creating an absurd dilemma, as the clerk in a great town, who may be able to spend two hours of healthy interest in the baseball park, could not possibly be indulging in the game himself and also because watching the game makes one all the more eager to play it if he has the chance, just as playing it makes him all the more eager to see how it is played by the greatest experts in the world.—Norman Hapgood in Metropolitan.

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

Its Star Spangled Canton is a Union,
Not a Union Jack.

Those who speak of the star spangled canton on the American flag as a "union jack" do so erroneously. It is rightly called the "union," but the term "jack" is applied correctly only to the similar canton on the British ensign, in which the crosses of St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick are superimposed.

The number of stars in the union of our flag is regulated by the law passed April 4, 1818, which provides:

"That on the admission of every new state into the Union one star shall be added to the union of the flag and that such addition shall take effect on the 4th of July next succeeding such ad-

CHICAGO, June 17.—Assertions that the weather was too cold northwest and too damp southwest, had much to do to-day with an advance in wheat. The market closed strong, $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ above Saturday's close. Latest trading left corn unchanged to $\frac{1}{4}$ down, oats carrying from the final figures of last week to $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ off and provisions irregular, strung out from $\frac{1}{4}$ decline to $\frac{1}{2}$ increase in cost. The Liverpool market closed to-day $\frac{1}{4}$ higher to $\frac{1}{2}$ lower than yesterday on wheat, and unchanged to $\frac{1}{4}$ lower on corn. At Berlin wheat closed $\frac{1}{4}$ higher, at Budapest $\frac{1}{4}$ higher, and at Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 17.—The export trade in all lines of grain continues very quiet. The foreign demand for wheat is limited, and bids were $\frac{1}{4}$ lower. The local demand for oats continues fair, and sales of some round lots were made for shipment from Fort William. The outside demand for car lots is fair at steady prices. Flour is firm, with only a small volume of business doing for both domestic and export account. Millfeed is quiet. The butter market is soft, owing to increased supplies and a smaller demand. Cheese was easier at a decline of $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢. Foreign demand good and considerable business done. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady.

SAW THE POINT.

After His Dog Had Been Kicked Around, Dewey had an English bulldog which was very proud. So his affection for the dog in the sphere of "love me, love me sprung up around the adobe canine. It is further recalled the animal came near causing a fight between the head of the late "Fighting Bob" Ev-

Dewey while on a tour of duty when he was in command of the squadron took the dog with him. He lost sight of his ship, but in a few minutes he was buried skyward from the sky as if shot from a catapult. In his eye Admiral Dewey had over to see the reason for the ascent, surmising that some one had kicked the late "Fighting Bob" at the steps.

...the admiral, "what do you mean kicking my dog?" ...red Evans in return, "I'd like that dog if he had been the president of the United States! He chewed the legs off fifteen dollar trousers and in edition de luxe of the trousers." ...the point and paid for the trousers.

state into the Union one star shall be added to the union of the flag and that such addition shall take effect on the 4th of July next succeeding such admission."

The Marine Journal says that the origin of the phrase union jack is uncertain, but that "the weight of evidence is to the effect that it was derived from Jacques or Jacobus, the French and Latin names of the Stuart king, in whose reign the superimposed crosses of St. George and St. Andrew were placed in the canton of the British flag to indicate the union of England and Scotland. In that generally accepted view of the case the name appropriately belongs to that part of the British flag, but it is a misnomer to apply it to the canton of the American flag, with which 'Jacobus Rex' certainly had nothing to do unless simply to set the example of placing a union emblem on the canton."

Theater Audiences.

The tricks of theater audiences have been remarkably similar in all ages. Alciphron, who wrote of the later Attic comedy, shows that the claque was known then and also "young men of the town" who took a malicious delight in hissing a play off the stage. Theophrastus, who died in 288 B. C., sketches among his "Characters" the man of superior taste, whose pride it was to hiss when everybody else applauded and to clap when the rest were silent, and the annoying person who would hum or whistle an accompaniment to every tune that pleased him. And Aristotle himself refers to spectators who brought out provisions during the dull parts of the performance.

Margaret Wore a Beard.

Bearded women have been very numerous. The most noted of the number was the famous Margaret of Austria, appointed by Charles V. to be governor of the Netherlands. She had a long, stiff black beard and, conceiving the idea that it added to the majesty of her appearance, was very careful of it and so combed and trained it as to make it seem much greater than it was.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 17.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended June 15 were 1600 cattle, 550 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 1000 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 800 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 250 calves.

There was no change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being firmly maintained for all grades, notwithstanding the fact that the supply was fully 200 head larger than a week ago. The quality of the stock in some instances was above the average, it being well finished and in prime condition, which sold readily at $3.50 per 100 pounds. There were a few loads of Manitoba domestic, hay-fed cattle on the market, and straight loads of steers and heifers sold at $3, and mixed loads at $7.50 per 100 pounds. Choice bulls were in demand at $7.50 to $7.75, and choice butchers' cows sold as high as $7 per 100 pounds.

The tone of the market for small meats was steady under a good demand, and light offerings. Ewe sheep brought $3 to $5.50 per 100 pounds, and spring lambs from $3 to $5 each, as to size and quality. Hog prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds, which was due to the smaller offerings. The demand was good and an active trade was done in selected lots at $9 to $9.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. Butchers' cattle, choice, $3.25 to $3.50; do, medium, $6.50 to $7.50; do, common, $5.25 to $6.25; do, choice cows, $5.50 to $7.

$4.50 to $4.75; lambs, $8.50 to $9.25. Hogs, f.o.b., $9 to $9.25. Calves, $3 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, June 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 4800; slow and 15c to 25c lower; prime steers, $9 to $9.35; shipping, $3.25 to $3.75; butchers, $6 to $6.50; heifers, $5.25 to $3.25; cows, $3 to $7; bulls, $4 to $7; stockers and feeders, $4.50 to $6; stock heifers, $4.25 to $5; fresh cows and springers, steady, $30 to $70.

Hogs—Receipts, 16,000; active and 15c to 20c lower; heavy and mixed, $7.50 to $7.55; yorkers, $7 to $7.60; pigs, $6.75 to $7; roughs, $6.40 to $6.50; stags, $5 to $3.75; dairies, $7 to $7.40.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5000; active and steady; lambs, $5 to $9; a few, $9.25; yearlings, $7.75 to $8; wethers, $5 to $5.25; ewes, $3.75 to $4.25; sheep, mixed, $1.50 to $4.75.

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDILL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee.

self to the play, when, quicker than lightning, the Italian jumps aside with a loud yell and makes a terrible lunge at Jean Louis, a Florentine trick often successful. But with extraordinary rapidity Jean Louis has parried and risks potes quickly in the shoulder.

"It is nothing," cries Giacomo, "a mere scratch." And they again fall on guard. Almost directly he is hit in the breast. This time the sword of Jean Louis, who is now attacking, penetrates deeply. Giacomo's face becomes livid, his sword drops from his hand, and he falls heavily on the turf. He is dead.

Jean Louis is already in position. He wipes his reeking blade; then, with the point of his sword on the ground, he calmly awaits the next man.

The best fencer of the First regiment has just been carried away a corpse, but the day is not yet over. Fourteen adversaries are there, impatient to measure swords with the conqueror, burning to avenge the master they had deemed invincible.

Jean Louis hardly has two minutes' rest. He is ready. A new adversary stands before him. A sinister click of swords is heard, a lunge, a parry, a riposte and then a cry, a sigh, and all is over. A second body is before Jean Louis.

A third adversary advances. They want Jean Louis to rest. "I am not tired," he answers, with a smile.

The signal is given. The Italian is as tall as the one who lies there a corpse covered by a military cloak. He has closely watched Jean Louis' play and thinks he has guessed the secret of his victories. He multiplies his feints and tricks; then, all at once, bounding like a tiger on his prey, he gives his opponent a terrible thrust in the lower line. But Jean Louis' sword has parried and is now deep within his opponent's breast.

What need we to relate any more? Ten new adversaries followed him, and the ten fell before Jean Louis amid the excited yells and roars of an army.

At the request of the Thirty-second regiment's colonel, who thought the lesson sufficient, Jean Louis after much pressing consented to stop the combat, and he shook hands with the two survivors, applauded by 10,000 men.

From that day fights ceased between French and Italian soldiers.

PUDDING MAKING.

Simple Desserts That Should Be Included In the Dinner Menu.

Puddings are such a wholesome addition to the menu that they ought to be provided daily. With their help a satisfactory meal can be provided at a smaller cost than is the case when we depend on soup, fish and meat courses alone.

Such an endless variety is possible that all tastes can be satisfied, and it is a pity more trouble is not taken to provide this variety instead of depending on the same half dozen or so puddings week after week the year round.

Certain principles must be followed in order to arrange a good dessert.

When every preceding dish is hot let the pudding be cold.

The hot pudding is required when there is no soup or when fish, cold meat or made up meat with vegetables form the principal dish for luncheon or dinner.

The necessary variety and sequence must be thought of.

For instance, tomato soup and fish with salad should not be followed by an acid sweet, such as lemon sponge or pudding.

White soup, creamed vegetables, fricassee with white sauce, cream salad dressing and a cream shape or custard must not appear at the same meal.

Apple pudding, as a matter of course should not follow steak and kidney pie nor rely on a substantial joint.

Let roast beef or mutton be followed by a light dessert and fish pie or rissoles by some such dish as a good molasses or sultana pudding.

NURSERY WALLS.

Paint That Can Be Washed Regularly Is Better Than Paper.

A case of ill health for which there was no apparent cause was recently traced by the physician to the presence of arsenic in the wall paper, and he said that it was not the first case of the kind he had had, trouble being most likely to arise in the nursery or bedroom, where so many hours are spent.

Many landlords, owners of houses, insist on cheap wall papers above the dining room floor, and it is not universally known that many of the cheap wall papers count arsenic in a somewhat large percentage among their constituent properties. The constant inhalation of this drug cannot fail to affect unfavorably the inhabitants of rooms so papered. A languid, lifeless, wretched feeling, ascribed to malaria or grip and treated with remedies for each ailment, may be due to the presence of this noxious drug in the wall paper.

Papers for bedrooms and nurseries should be chosen with especial care. It is really better to have the walls painted some pretty tint and ornamented with a dado for the nursery of animals cut out and pasted on. The advantage of a painted wall is that it can be washed down once a week and rendered thoroughly, antiseptically clean. Germs cannot lurk on such a wall so treated. The ceiling of a nursery should be calcimined, not papered, if your children are to escape many petty ailments.

Plaiting In Spring Models.

One or two of the couturiers have introduced plaitings in their spring models. This rather pronounced frock is a hint that the straight skirt line is

Farm and Garden

FRUIT TREE ENEMY.

Called Pear Thrips, but May Feed or Work on Other Plants.

A recent surprise to entomologists is the finding of pear thrips in New York state, says a bulletin of the state agricultural experiment station. This insect has been present in California in destructive numbers for several years, but it was unidentified in the east until the spring of 1911.

In 1910, when the loss from the thrips was greatest, pear growers in the region about Germantown, N. Y., found their Kieffer crops reduced from one-third to nine-tenths or even more.

The mature thrips is a very minute insect, only one-twentieth of an inch long. It is dark brown in color, appearing almost black on casual view, and bears four peculiar long, narrow, feathery wings, which gave the thrips its old name, "fringe wings." The wings are simple, and each consists merely of a single strong rib bordered by closely set long hairs.

These adults come from resting cells in the soil, where they have spent the winter. The date of emergence varies with the season, but is apparently timed to precede by a few days the swelling and opening of the pear buds.

While commonly called "pear" thrips, this pest may feed or work on quite a range of plants. It was found in New York during 1911 on apple, apricot, cherry, peach, plum and quince as well as on pear, and in California it also attacks almond, fig, grape and English walnut. If it becomes established in the east it may have to be fought on the above fruits and probably others.

As a sucking insect the thrips cannot be reached by internal poisons, but must be destroyed by contact insecticides. It is not difficult to kill if reached, as the spraying experiments of

HOMEMADE ENGINE MUFF

If Your Gasoline Machine Is Here's a Way to Check

If the gasoline engine makes much noise it is easy to make a muffler that will silence the engine just as effectively as a purchased apparatus, says Orange Judd. The muffler is made from sheet metal and a piece of six inch pipe. The funnels should be placed across the top and should be shown by A in the drawing. These pieces into the stove fasten the large ends with screws in about four places a pipe.

In placing the funnels the ends of each should go on a line opening of the ends, as indicated by the line A A in the drawing. The funnels to fill up the length of the stovepipe.

The ends of the muffler at floor plates threaded to exhaust pipe D from the floor plate B should fit firmly at the end of the stovepipe and be fastened there by screws. The exhaust pipe C is attached. The funnels must be in a direct line with the inlet pipe D and the exhaust pipe E so that the gases will have a free passage. This will avoid the danger of the muffler becoming stopped up.

Some believe that a muffler greatly reduces the noise of an engine. Tests made with this muffler have shown that there is practically no difference with the muffler on

FARMING WITH A PENCIL.

The most important element in farming is a lead pencil. It is the only one that can tell you how much you are losing. It cannot know what he is doing. One cannot know the profits or the losses at any time required in keeping accounts will be but a few minutes a day. In many cases the profits will be more for the minutes than for the rest of the day's work.—Professor Palmer, North Dakota Agricultural College.

KEEP THE MILK C

Four Simple, Inexpensive Plans Which Any One Can Observe

The Virginia experiment station has found by actual experiment that the number of bacteria in milk is greatly reduced. This is of great importance, because it reduces the liability of contamination from bacteria as well as those that cause souring, disagreeable odors, and so on. By count it was found that by a light dessert and fish pie or rissoles by some such dish as a good molasses or sultana pudding.

Perfectly cooked, plain boiled rice is a simple dessert that can hardly be improved on if taken in conjunction with stewed fruit, cream and jam or, simpler still, with milk and brown sugar.

Stewed fruit never fails us at any season and is one of the most inexpensive and wholesome of foods, one also of which few ever tire.

When eggs are cheap they should be freely used for souffles, batter puddings and omelets. At other times baked and steamed puddings made from flour combined with various sirups, etc., are an excellent substitute.

Eccentrically Poised Sashes.

The sash may be anywhere on the gown this summer—around the waist around the knees, at back or front or on either side. This smart frock of crochet lace and cream satin meteor is made very unusual by the sash of black velvet ribbon placed directly in the center front.

Black satin boots with white buttons echo the black and white note of the sash.

In spring the farmer is down and out—down in the furrow, out in the field.

Melon Bugs.

To get rid of the melon aphids, the little bug that spoils your crops, spray the vines with a mixture of eight pounds of whale oil or laundry soap to fifty gallons of water or one part "black leaf 40," a tobacco concoction, to 1,000 parts of water to which whale oil or laundry soap has been added at the rate of four pounds to fifty gallons of water, says the professor of entomology at the Kansas Agricultural college.

FROCK OF ACCORDION PLAITED CHIFFON.

passing. The tunic of accordion plaited chiffon looped over a trailing skirt with knots of ribbon is decidedly an innovation. The set in sleeve and natural waist line are also evidences of a new fashion standard.

Something Dainty In Cretonnes.

During the spring cleaning, which is upon us, the question of new cretonnes and their kindred fabrics for loose covers and summer curtains is one that is very much to the fore. The marked feeling of the moment for soft grays and mauves as dominant notes in the new color schemes finds admirable expression in a great variety of ways. There is, for example, a double width cretonne of fascinating coloring, in which beautifully drawn roses in shades of mauve are massed upon a background of gray foliage with just the suggestion of a trellis running through it in a birch bark tint.

The same idea as to design, but with the omission of the trellis, is expressed in another, wherein the gray foliage gives the characteristic color effect, contrasting with clusters of large, old fashioned pink roses. This will, perhaps, be more satisfying to those who cannot quite reconcile themselves to such a defiance of nature as a rose in mauve.

Timely Tip.

Where there are several long haired little girls in a family the shampooing amounts to a tiresome and trying task. One mother, whose little daughter has unusually luxuriant hair, has robbed the process of most of its terrors.

"Instead of having my little girl lean over a bowl, with all her hair turned the wrong way over her face," she says, "I now let her lie out straight in as comfortable a position as she wishes. A couch will answer the purpose or any flat surface.

"I braid the hair very loosely in two braids, roll a bath towel under her neck and place a table so that it comes on the same level with her head, with her hair hanging over into a bowl of water placed on the table. I wash first one side and then the other, rinse well and wash the braids thoroughly. The drying and combing are easily accomplished, because the hair has been in its natural order all the time."

Value In Straw Stacks.

Many farm leases this year contain a new and wise provision stipulating that straw must either be converted into manure on the premises or its equivalent in manure returned by those carrying it away. City dealers who have gone to the country recently to contract straw have met with flat refusals. Where straw has been sold to neighbors the return of manure has been demanded. The average farm owner even when a nonresident is learning that soil depletion is poor policy.—Breeder's Gazette.

KIEFFER PEAR BLOSSOM AND LEAF CLUSTERS INJURED BY THRIPS.

1911 proved that it would be destroyed by a good wetting with any of the insecticides used. The difficulty is, however, that the adults very soon get into the buds, where spray mixtures cannot reach them directly. Early recognition of their presence and prompt, thorough, quickly repeated applications are necessary for success.

The nicotine preparations are very effective, especially when combined with an oil emulsion which has a penetrating quality.

In spraying two objects should be kept in mind—first, to kill the winged thrips working in and about expanding buds and blossom clusters to prevent injury to the tender flower and leaf parts and, second, to destroy the larvae after petals drop to reduce the number of insects which will mature in the ground.

Law Points For the Farmer.

A farmer in Pennsylvania is legally obliged to fence both sides of a public road running through his farm. A legal fence may be of wire, with or without bars.

The Farm Journal says wood cut on the farm is personal property and would not pass under a deed as the wood house would in which it was piled, in the absence, of course, of any special mention being made in the deed.

Where a seller is not the manufacturer of an article sold and the buyer has an opportunity of examining it there is no implied warranty, in the absence of fraud, that it shall be fit for the purposes for which it is bought, and unless there is an express warranty the doctrine of caveat emptor (let the buyer guard himself) applies.—Construction Company versus Dorsey, Md. 78 Atl., 1099.

"Upon the lease of a farm by A. to B. is B. entitled to a gasoline engine mounted on wheels which A. had used on the farm, moving it from place to place to pump water, nothing having been said in regard to the engine in the lease?" asks a Nebraska reader of the Farm Journal. The answer made is: "No. B. would not be entitled to the engine because it is not a part of the farm leased. It is not attached to the land nor to the buildings, and it may be removed without injury to the leased property."

Not Full Grief.

"Gladys is very strict in her ideas about the appropriate touch in dress."

"Is she?"

"So much so that when her half sister died she would not wear any but half mourning."—Baltimore American.

PLANNING THE FARM HOME.

Worth Any Farmer's While to Pay
Close Attention to the Details.

In the introduction of a bulletin recently prepared by A. T. Irwin of the Iowa Agricultural college relating to the adornment of the farm home attention is called to the fact that neat, conveniently arranged buildings and a well kept lawn attractively bordered with trees and shrubs add greatly to the appearance and value of the farm and to the happiness of its occupants.

A well thought out plan is the first requisite to get these results, as in the absence of a definite scheme serious mistakes are likely to be made. This plan should include the location of buildings, drives, walks, trees, shrubbery and every other feature which contributes either to the convenience or ornamentation of the place. The location of the house and farm buildings is the first consideration. Even though it happens that some or all of these are already on the ground a plan for their location is important. New farm homes are erected to supplant old ones, and other new farm structures are added, which make practicable a general consideration of the entire building scheme. Material improvements can often be made in a farmstead by a readjustment as new buildings are put up, though the best results are obtained where things are planned right from the start.

In selecting a site for the house good drainage is the first requisite. A south or east slope is generally to be preferred, while a north slope is undesirable. In its location give the house greatest prominence. The farmstead first of all provides a home, and the residence should stand out as the central and most conspicuous feature of the picture. To place the barn and other buildings in front of the house is to reverse the logical order of things.
Locate the house back far enough from the highway to afford privacy and give a good stretch of lawn in front and yet not so far back as to suggest a spirit of exclusion nor with a lawn so

nese for the discovery of the virtues of the silkworm. Its product was unknown in Rome until the time of Julius Caesar, and so costly was the material that even the Emperor Aurelian refused a dress of this lustrous fabric to his empress. Now it is nurtured in almost every country, and its products are within the reach of all.

Besides the several domesticated species, there is a wild silkworm found in Central America which weaves a baglike structure two feet
in depth that hangs from the trees.
At a distance the nest resembles a huge matted cobweb. The insect makes no cocoon, but weaves the silk in layers and skeins around the inside of the nest. From Tegucigalpa
there were sent to England some years ago about six pounds of this silk.
There it was made into handkerchiefs
not easily detected from common silk
of equal strength and delicate texture.

There is a curious silk producing spider in Central America, the arana de seda, which may be seen hurrying along with a load of fine silk on its back, from which trail numerous delicate filaments.—Harper's Weekly.

THE LOST ATLANTIS.

Fate of the Continental Island as Told
by the Ancients.

"The Lost Atlantis" is a favorite subject of song and story, and even now strange tales are told by sailors who claim to have seen a great white city rearing its domes and minarets up through the green of the sea.

Atlantis was a continental island between Europe and America. Solon as long ago as 600 B. C. learned the story in Egypt, and it is from him and later from Plato that the tale has been handed down to modern peoples.

Atlantis was reigned over by three kings of marvelous power, and the inhabitants were a warlike people far advanced in civilization. The three kings finally became so puffed with power that they united forces and planned a descent on Europe, the purpose of which was to destroy and en-slave. The Athenians met the invaders and after a fearful battle gained a decisive victory.

Two days later mighty earthquakes
shook the earth, and tremendous inundations came. When peace succeeded elemental turmoil the sea stretched where once had been Atlantis.

A Quicker Process.

A story is told of a certain famous inventor who is fortunate enough to be able to employ a large staff of engineers and mathematicians to aid him
in the solution of knotty problems.
Some time ago the inventor desired to find the cubic capacity of a certain vessel of unsymmetrical proportions and asked his mathematicians to solve the problem. As the story goes, the mathematicians spent weeks of time, filled whole books with their calculations and finally presented what they said was a close approximation to the true result. Thereupon the famous inventor placed the vessel on a platform

the stable stirred and uniform. The outlet flues or ventilators must extend to the top of the roof. Up to the present time the King system of ventilation or a modification of it is perhaps one of the best. Details of it may be had from any agricultural college.

It is probably not advisable to allow the temperature of the stable to fall much below 40 degrees in the coldest weather, but in no case should a high temperature be maintained at the expense of ventilation. If the air of the stable is dry cattle can stand quite a low temperature without discomfort. Too warm and badly ventilated quarters are largely responsible for the prevalence of tuberculosis. On the other hand, a low enough temperature to cause the cows to chill will quickly be shown in a decreased milk flow. Cows exposed to extreme cold require more grain food and give a smaller yield of milk.

Cement Floor the Best.

The best floor is made of cement.
It is sanitary, durable and easily kept clean. If bedding is scarce and the floor very cold it is advisable to have a plank platform for the cows to lie on, otherwise rheumatism may develop. This wooden floor must be taken up occasionally and the stalls well cleaned. Many a valuable cow is lost by allowing her to lie on a damp, cold floor with probably a draft on her hind quarters. Inflammation of the udder is the result.

There are many contrivances for fastening the cows in the stall. Do not be cruel enough to have the rigid stan-chion. The swinging stanchion is being installed in many stables and is greatly liked. The upright iron bar with the sliding ring and chain is, in the opinion of many, the easiest and best kind of tie. A later form of chain tie which is an improvement on the old style calls for a bar on each side of the stall and a ring on each bar, with a chain on each ring. These two chains are joined in the center by a ring to which is attached the chain which goes around the cow's neck.
The bars are short and should be placed with their lower end about eighteen inches from the floor. The side chains should be slack enough so that when not attached to the cow,
the center will hang eight or ten inches from the floor. This tie gives more liberty than the stanchion and does not interfere with the cow when rising.

The basement stable is losing favor,
as it is hard to build one and avoid dampness and darkness—two enemies to health.

The Ideal Stable.

flanks of the cows were sponged before milking. The percentage of bacteria was reduced. By discarding the milk from the pails from each teat the percentage was further reduced.

Precautions, sprinkling moistening the flanks of the cows with a closed pail and discarding the first four milkings, may without appreciable expense greatly reduce the contamination.

Straw and sawdust were used for sanitation, and it was found that fewer bacteria were found when straw was used for bedding, than when an absorbent for sawdust has some value as a ferment. Straw is preferred to sawdust none straw is preferred.

the highway to afford privacy and give a good stretch of lawn in front and yet not so far back as to suggest a spirit of exclusion nor with a lawn so large that it cannot be properly cared for.

The general farm buildings should be in the rear of the farmhouse and the stable at least 150 or 200 feet away. Locate them to avoid odors being carried to the house by the summer winds. So far as practicable arrange the farm buildings to serve as a windbreak. Locate the yards on the side farthest from the house, though it is often an advantage to provide a paddock near the highway for the display of the farm herds.

The business side of the farm must not be lost sight of, and special features of the general building equipment may be given prominence, such as the seed house or any other important feature of the place.

The farm is the basis of all industry, but for many years this country has made the mistake of unduly assisting manufactures, commerce and other activities that center in cities at the expense of the farm.—James J. Hill.

Dosing a Sheep.

Sheep medicine needs to be given carefully and should be as small as possible in quantity. Doses are administered by holding the animal between the knees and pouring the fluid into the mouth, observing the same precautions as to coughing as with other animals. The best form of bottle in the absence of the patented article is that in which the saucers are sent out. They are strong, have a narrow neck and are generally of about the right capacity—six to eight ounces.—American Cultivator.

Quaint Embroidery.

Quaint, old fashioned embroidery is the rage nowadays, not only for fancy articles, but for dress trimmings as well.

Over in Paris the great designers of women's apparel are using all sorts of curious old designs in wool, silk and linen embroidery to trim their masterpieces.

Floral designs worked with wool on canvas are the newest conceit that has caught the fancy of the French modiste. This is not at all difficult to do and can easily be copied by any one who can use a needle and is clever with color combinations.

Or the canvas can be bought stamped in colors, ready to be worked. These come in collar and cuff sets, vest patterns, bands and revers that add a most attractive touch to a somber gown, especially if the embroidery be done in bright colors.

For the Glue Bottle.

To save trouble, after opening a bottle of glue or cement rub mutton tallow upon a sound cork before inserting it in the bottle.

This prevents the cork from sticking fast, only to be broken in small bits when an attempt is made to remove it.

was a close approximation to the true result. Thereupon the famous inventor placed the vessel on a platform scale, filled it to the brim with water, obtained its weight when full and when empty, and in a few minutes he had a result as good as the mathematicians—for that particular vessel.—Engineering News.

He Liked Turtle.

Charles Kean in forcing a tavern companion to take mustard with his beef showed a more generous disposition than a city magnate who figures in the "Memoirs of Grantley Berkeley." Although a hearty feeder, Berkeley did not like fat and when served with turtle soup always left the green fat on the side of his plate. This is considered by many to be the best part of the dish, and at a city dinner Berkeley attended his neighbor observed him with horror deliberately rejecting the unctuous green fragments. "At length his feelings got the better of the alderman, and after demolishing his third helping of turtle he swept all the fat from my plate on to his, grunting contemptuously, 'I see they're wasted on you.'"—London Chronicle.

His Geography.

Ample explanation of the many attempts to construct a universal language lies enfolded in the reply of a small boy, given by Mrs. Hugh Fraser in "A Diplomatist's Wife in Many Lands."

The irregular French verbs—what a terror those were to children! My own little boy when he was seven years old was asked by his teacher a question in geography.

"What separates England from France?"

"The irregular verbs," he replied, with mournful conviction.

Going Away Suit.

Next to the wedding gown, the going away costume is of prime importance. Most brides this spring are planning to start on the wedding trip in a smartly made taffeta suit, with a gay little cutaway coat and skirt trimmed with the approved number of corded puffings, quillings or plaitings and at least two dozen of the ultra smart crystal buttons. The taffeta suit reigns supreme this season, and no trousseau will be complete without one of these dashing and feminine little suits of navy blue or plum colored taffeta or of changeable taffeta in black and blue, black and green, brown and black or some other modish combination. At the first stopping place the dressy taffeta going away suit will be exchanged for a more practical costume of serge or one of the good looking English or tweed mixtures, which are always satisfactory in well tailored models.

Just Hints.

By slipping stiff collars into a glass tumbler after they are ironed and allowing them to thoroughly dry they can be made to keep their shape.

Elasticity is restored to rubber by soaking it in one part of ammonia and two parts of clear water until the desired results are obtained. This is especially true in the case of rings or other articles that have become stiff and brittle.

The Ideal Stable.
The ideal cow stable is one without storage loft or cellar and where no other animals are housed. Such a building is expensive and involves more labor in caring for the stock. In building a new stable every contrivance to save labor that can be afforded should be installed. Spend time and money in visiting new barns and studying plans. A wise planning means less hired help and more satisfaction in doing the work. Have doors and passages arranged to save steps. A convenient way of bringing the water into the stable and watering the cows, a wide feed passage, a good gutter, mangers easy to keep clean, modern litter carriers, manure shed with cement floor, silo, feed bins and root cellar handy are points to note. A stable should be whitewashed inside at least every fall. The lime dis-

PART OF GRANT PAID.

Ontario Gets Half of Share For Agricultural Work.

Toronto, June 18.—The Ontario Government has received its share of the $500,000 grant for agriculture, which the Dominion Government decided to divide among the nine provinces at its last session. It was announced at the Parliament Buildings yesterday that this province would benefit to the amount of $175,753 of the Federal grant. A cheque for one-half of this sum has been received and the balance will be payable when Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, decides that it is necessary to further promote the work of development throughout the province.

throughout the province.

Hon. J. S. Duff has been in conference with Hon. Martin Burrell at Ottawa during the past few days mapping out the work that the Provincial Government wished to accomplish with the financial assistance from the Dominion Government. In all, 17 branches of the Department will benefit by the grant.

This grant has no connection whatever with the work of C. C. James, former Deputy Minister of Agriculture, who was recently appointed to a Dominion post in the Department of Agriculture. It is explained that this money is merely a preliminary to a permanent scheme that Mr. James is trying to bring about for the Government, fixing the amount that each province is to receive each year. The Federal grant comes at a very opportune moment to further advance some of the schemes of Hon. Mr. Duff.

The following gives the plan for expenditure of Federal grant for agriculture:

Field Husbandry Building, Ontario Agricultural, $40,000.

This will provide for accommodation for the department of field husbandry at the college. It will also give greatly increased facilities for the work in seed improvement carried on in conjunction with 5,000 farmers throughout the province.

District Representatives, $21,000.

This will be used to pay the expenses and some of the salaries in connection with the work of new representatives, and also to extend the work and usefulness of representatives already appointed.

Poultry Work, $10,000.

The object of this is to further develop the poultry industry throughout the province. To do this it is necessary to extend the equipment at the college to carry on breeding work on a larger scale in order to supply both birds and eggs of the best breeds.

Milking Shorthorns, $12,500.

This provides for the purchase in England of a small herd of high-class milking shorthorns in order to test the possibilities of the development of a class of cattle in Ontario which will be profitable both for beef and milk production.

Fruit Works, $9,000.

This includes $3,000 for the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition in addition to the $2,000 they are now receiving, $3,000 for orchard competition, and $3,000 for a market commissioner to develop markets for the sale of Ontario fruit in the west.

Short Courses, $7,000.

This makes provision for a largely increased number of short courses in stock-raising and seed improvement, which have proven so effective and popular.

Eastern Ontario Live Stock Building, $10,000.

This is a contribution toward more accommodation for the Winter Fair held at Ottawa.

Special Grants for Agricultural Exhibition Buildings, $10,000.

This includes $5,000 for Fort William and Port Arthur, $2,500 for London, and $2,500 for Windsor.

Other items are: Agricultural work in connection with public schools, including school garden, seed displays, etc., $10,000; drainage work, $5,000;

Are Kidneys Fit to Eat.

We think not. It is the kidneys that abstract uric acid and other soluble impurities from the blood. The kidneys are often diseased, the tubes becoming inflamed and full of pus so that they fail to do their work and cause weakness and pain in the back and rheumatism, diabetes, puffiness under the eyes, follow. In such cases Merrill's System Tonic will be found invaluable. It contains buchu to soothe the inflammation and purifies the blood from the accumulated poisons. Old people and children need System Tonic to prevent too frequent urination, and to take away the burning sensation. All druggists sell Merrill's System Tonic. Price 50c. 6 boxes for $2.50. Minister Says Commercialism Kills Religion.

June 18.—"We are compelled to see that the additions to the membership of our churches are out of proportion to the increase of men, money and effort that has been made in and by the church."

The report embodied in the report of the committee on the state of the church at the Methodist conference yesterday, brought about a warm discussion on the part of the members.

E. Scott thought the generosity of the country was the cause of the falling off in church membership. "It is not only in the Methodist Church where a decline has been felt; it has been evident in every denomination," he said. "You can hardly get on a street today without hearing ministers and church members discussing the decline."

He thought the Methodist Church seemed to have lost confidence in itself to hold old-time services. "What we now need is a season of prayer and we also need the laymen to stand by us in our efforts to bring in the unconverted."

R. Aikenhead quoted figures that last year over 34,000 members drifted away, and stated that he did not know where they went.

Mr. Aikenhead thought the quarters of the ministers were too comfortable, and that takes up nearly all their time which should be spent in the field.

Following are some interesting facts as submitted in the report.

Comparatively slight attraction of the pulpit to young men of service and an opportunity to live one's life to the highest, is a widespread complaint. Our own church has, perhaps, less in this regard than some other churches; but that we are suffering from this cause cannot be denied.

We must carefully guard against the danger of panic, or a resort to the methods which cannot effect a permanent cure. We may deplore, but we cannot patent medicines, and we cannot ultimately create a false condition of affairs. For in order to secure increased membership upon our preaching we must not degrade our message, but give the evangel of Jesus something more immediately appealing to the carnal mind."

The committee report read by J. W. Duff, stated that the inefficient salaries of the ministers in some of the communities declared that of these men were absolutely inadequate in their work on account of the meagre allowance allotted to them.

The ministerial salaries committee have been organized in nearly every circuit, and a great many reports to accomplish anything on the part of the laity of members and

NE TEMERE DECISION

Judges Say Dominion Is Powerless to Pass Marriage Law.

Canadian Supreme Court Agrees That the Provinces Have the Right to Supervise the Marriage of Residents — Majority Say Protestant Can Marry Two Catholics or One Catholic In Quebec.

Ottawa, June 18.—The Canadian Parliament has no authority to enact a uniform federal marriage law, as proposed in the famous Lancaster bill.

The law of the Province of Quebec does not nullify a mixed marriage, or a marriage between two Roman Catholics, otherwise legally binding, when performed by other than a Roman Catholic priest.

These are the two outstanding features in the eagerly awaited judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, delivered at noon yesterday on the reference submitted by the Dominion Government. Yesterday's proceedings were brief.

No final judgment will be reached until the judicial committee of the Privy Council has made its pronouncement, as the Dominion Government will now proceed to appeal and a judgment may be reached by the coming autumn.

The court answers the questions as follows:

Question 1.—(a) Has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact, in the whole or in part, bill No. 3 of the first session of the 12th Parliament of Canada, intituled, "An act to amend the Marriage Act?" (b) If the provisions of the said bill are not all within the authority of the Parliament of Canada to enact, which, if any, of the provisions are within such authority?

Answer 1.—(both branches)—Chief Justice Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Justices Duff, Anglin and Davies, answer "No."

Justice Idington answers: "It is an impossible bill as it stands. If I must answer categorically, then I say as follows: The retrospective part would be good as part of a scheme for concurrent legislation by Parliament and by the Legislatures confirming past marriages, which probably neither can effectually do. The prospective part so far as it is possible to make effective prohibition a religious test may be good, but it is doubtful, and the probable purpose can be reached by a better bill."

Question 2.—Does the law of the Province of Quebec render null and void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage which would otherwise be legally binding which takes place in such province, (a) Between persons who are both Roman Catholics, or (b) between persons one of whom only is a Roman Catholic?

Answer.—The chief justice asks permission to decline to answer the first branch. To branch one, Justices Idington, Duff and Davies: "No." Justice Anglin, "Yes."

To branch two of question two, the court unanimously answers, "No."

Question 3.—If either (a) or (b) of the last preceding question is answered in the affirmative, or if both of them are answered in the affirmative, demonstrate that, apart from any laws of the Catholic Church, by the civil law of the province a marriage by a Protestant clergyman of two Catholics is invalid.

His lordships says: "Primarily, if not solely," for the purposes of their own congregation, the exclusive right of Anglican clergymen to marry Protestants was thus taken away, but the requirement of the civil law that Catholics must be married by their proper cure was not altered.

That was the law of Lower Canada in 1866. The code was intended to express that law. Such were the instructions to the codifiers.

They reported that in dealing with marriage they had left everybody in "the enjoyment of his own usages and practices according to which the celebration of marriage is entrusted to the ministers of the worship to which he belongs."

SCOTT ISSUES PLATFORM.

Saskatchewan's Premier Dissolves the Legislature.

Regina, Sask., June 18.—The third Legislature of the Province of Saskatchewan has been dissolved and the writs for a general election issued.

Nominations will take place Thursday, July 4, and polling on Thursday, July 11.

The Legislature just dissolved had a membership of 41, but the next House as a result of a redistribution bill put through at the last session, will have 54 members.

The chief issue of the Liberals is reciprocity, and Conservative railway development. Premier Scott has issued a lengthy appeal to the electorate.

"Leaders may say what they like, the reciprocity issue exists. It is made by the people themselves. Conservatives would like to believe it dead, but it is alive and must ultimately triumph. The issue embraces the entire field of wider markets, freer trade and lower tariffs. By a majority of nearly twenty thousand votes our people declared for these principles last September. They were in earnest then, and unless I misjudge public opinion, the severe lessons of this past season have made them more earnest and more determined to carry on the struggle for their rights."

"It would be idle for me to state this issue is not at stake for this contest. The provincial Conservative party has adopted a policy and formed an alliance that make the situation clear. Let us no longer try to conceal the fact that they look almost solely to the assistance of the Federal Government and its principal machine to bring about their success. The battle cry of the Conservatives became, 'Saskatchewan for Borden and Haultain.' This can only be interpreted as meaning Saskatchewan for limited markets, restricted trade and higher tariffs."

A MARTYR TO HAY FEVER

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured After 15 Years' Suffering

CORNWALL CENTRE, ONT.,

NOVEMBER 27th 1911.

"I was a martyr to Hay Fever for probably fifteen years and I suffered terribly at times. I consulted many physicians and took their treatment, and I tried every remedy I heard of as being good for Hay Fever but nothing helped me."

Then I heard of "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them, and I am thankful to say that this remedy cured me completely."

To every sufferer from Hay Fever, I wish to say—"Try Fruit-a-tives". This medicine cured me when every other treatment failed, and I believe it is a perfect cure for this dreadful disease—Hay Fever."

MRS. HENRY KEMP.

The real cause of Hay Fever is poisoned blood, due to the faulty action of the bowels, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" cleans the blood by regulating bowels, kidneys and skin—and thus relieves the excessive strain on the nervous system. Try "Fruit-a-tives".

A Kingdom For a Horse.

The king of England owes his crown to a horse's shoe. The act of settlement by which in 1701 parliament elected the house of Hanover to the British throne, passed the commons by only one majority. This deciding vote was given by Sir Arthur Owen, M. P. for Pembrokeshire, third of his title, who rode post haste from Wales for the purpose. He had relays of fresh horses all along the route, but arrived, dusty and travel worn, at Westminster barely in time to the very minute. Had one of his horses gone lame or cast a shoe he would have been too late.

Holland's Flowers.

The Dutch are a nation of flower lovers, skilled gardeners and inventive farmers. On canal boats, on floating river houses, around farmhouses, in humble village and great city one finds flowers, flowers, flowers. Some one has said that Holland's illustrious conquerors have been her engineers and her florists. Through this flower culture has come her wealth, for this has been one of her chief industries.—Magazine Flowers.

to bunch two of question two, the court unanimously answers, "No."

Question 3.—If either (a) or (b) of the last preceding question is answered in the affirmative, or if both of them are answered in the affirmative, has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact that all such marriages whether (a) heretofore solemnized, or (b) hereafter to be solemnized, shall be legal and binding?

Answer—(Branch a): The chief justice, Justices Davies, Duff and Anglin, "No." Justice Idington says: "As to question three, branch 'a,' answer 'Yes,' to be concurred in by the respective Legislatures of the provinces concerned, and as to branch 'b,' answer 'Yes,' if and when province fails to provide adequate means of solemnization."

The answers to question two show the court unanimous in confirming the decision in the Hebert case that a Protestant-clergyman can officiate at a "mixed" marriage. A majority of the judges go further and say a Protestant clergyman can solemnize the marriage of two Roman Catholics.

Only the dissenting opinion of Justice Anglin was ready yesterday. In part it was as follows:

After expressing his concurrence in Sir Louis Davies' "reasons for answering the first question in the negative," Mr. Justice Anglin proceeds with the second question, as to the civil validity in Quebec (a) of marriages of two Catholics, (b) of mixed marriage solemnized by Protestant clergymen.

His lordship gives several reasons why the court should represent to the Government that it is undesirable to answer this question.

But in deference to the views of the majority of his colleagues, who think an answer should now be given to the second question, the learned judge proceeds to discuss it at length and to answer it. He first states, however, that ecclesiastical law can be recognized in Canadian civil courts so far, but so far only, as the common law incorporates it, or, the Legislature has recognized and given civil efficacy to it. The discretion of the Legislature is supreme.

The Quebec civil code was passed in 1866 by the Legislature of the then Province of Canada, which had full legislative jurisdiction over marriage.

The decree of the Council of Trent was in force in the Catholic Church in Quebec in 1866. It renders void any marriage not solemnized before the parish priest of the parties, or a priest authorized to act by him or the bishop. It declares the parties incapable of thus contracting marriage. Therefore, says his lordship, the impediment thus created was made part of the civil law of Quebec by article 127 of the code as an impediment recognized by the religious persuasion of the Catholic Church.

But, because by the later benedictine declaration, which was made applicable to Canada in 1764 and remained in force in 1866, the Catholic Church excepted mixed marriages from the Trinidentine decree and declared them valid, though not solemnized before a Catholic priest. His lordship holds that mixed marriages celebrated before a Protestant minister are civilly valid in Quebec, the recent ne temere decree, he says, has no civil force in Quebec. It is excluded from Article 127 by the word hitherto," and it has not been otherwise recognized by the Legislature. Mr Mignault conceded this.

The learned judge then proceeds to

WESTERN VS TRINITY.

Monday nights game in the Church League between Trinity and Western teams resulted in another win for the boys of the Western Church by a score of 12-4. The winners are a well balanced team and look very much as though they have it on the other fellows by a considerable margin. They have a pretty good battery, are good fielders, and best of all can swat the ball like senior players. Nevertheless with all these good qualities the Trinity boys kept them guessing in the early stages of the game and put it all over them in the first three innings. The usual crowd of spectators were present and enjoyed the game immensely.

First Practical Test of Davy's Safety Lamp Was Dramatic.

If you have ever looked at pictures of coal miners you must have noticed that they are sometimes represented with peculiar little lamps stuck in their caps. These are known as the Davy safety lamp. The flame is entirely surrounded with very fine gauze wire, which permits enough air to enter to keep the lamp alight, but is too fine for any flame to pass through it. The dangerous gases in the coal mine can enter the lamp and burn, but the flame cannot get out.

Before this invention the miners often worked in absolute darkness, as it would have been madness to carry a light into any coal mine, where what is called fire damp is common.

The safety lamp was invented by Sir Humphry Davy, a famous English scientist, but the wonderful thing about the story of its invention is that no one could be found who would dare to carry it into a coal mine to test it.

On Jan. 9, 1816, John Hodgson, a miner who lived near Newcastle, in the north of England, which is a great coal mining region, volunteered to go down into the Hebburn coal pit with a lighted Davy lamp in his hand so as to settle for all time whether it was really a safety lamp or no.

The first miner who saw him approach was nearly beside himself with terror and screamed and prayed for whoever it was to put out the light before it was too late. But the minister walked steadily on, confident in the truth of the scientific fact upon which the lamp was built, until he got close enough for the miner to recognize him.

Every miner in the pit knew the parson, and their confidence in him and what he told them was greater than their faith in the lamp, much as they desired it. But for the bravery of this Newcastle preacher it might have been a long time before the lamp came into use, if at all.—Exchange.
